I've been given some prices from the AD...£2300 (5957 pieces)for the 861 steel, and £5500 (1957 pieces)for the enamel steel...that one comes in a great wooden box with strap tool and bracelet etc....

I take it that these prices include 17% VAT?? If so, then the price of the cal. 1861 model appears on par with other limited editions. However, the price of the cal. 3201 SS model is outrageous for a stripped-down cal. 3313. That must be a really expensive box!

These are not necessarily finalised prices....the box looks good though...I will post the picture if I get the chance.

Thanks for the pictures. Looks like you get quite a package with the enamel version any idea what all those pieces are.

Cheers

Peter

Nice of them to go all out with the wooden box and spring-bar tool, all for only £5500. ;)

£45 for a high-quality Bergeon spring-bar tool on their own. That is indeed a lovely box though :)

There was definitely sarcasm in my previous post, but you're right about that box. It really does look to be a fine piece of craftsmanship in and of itself.

If that remains the real price, I suspect *a lot* of these are going to stay on the shelves. As far as I could tell the previous LEs didn't exactly zip off the shelves. Considering you could get a Daytona at street price for this, or get pretty close to a IWC Portuguese, this pricing seems mostly insane.
