Description

Item Specifics - Wristwatches

Brand: Omega Age: 1970-1999
Gender: Men's Condition: --
Features: Chronograph, Day/Date

This is a very rare Omega cal. 1045 that was made in the 1970's to commemorate the World Cup. It has an orange bezel marking the 45 minutes of a half of a soccer game. This watch comes from my personal collection. I have seen only two of these watches on the internet over the years and do not know much more about the history of this watch.

However, I can say that this watch is in GREAT overall condition and it functions perfectly! It is evident that this watch has not had a lot of wear during its lifetime. The case is in excellent condition with only a few barely visible light scratches. The back is also in good condition with a few minor scratches from what I guess was a jewelers tool used during servicing. The stainless steel Omega band is also in good condition with a few minor light scratches on the band itself and the signed buckle. The black dial is in mint condition and the crystal is almost as well with only the slightest light scratch on the side of the crystal between the seven and eight (I had never even noticed this imperfection until I closely examined this watch for the writing of this description). As I stated before, the watch keeps great time and the chronograph is functioning perfectly.

This is a great opportunity to own this very rare watch at a very reasonable reserve price. Don't miss out. This will make a great addition to your collection.
